LOGNOTE -- Chief, Operations Group, 1 August 1983

1. Talking with a number of the editors just returning from their field assignments I found a general interest in learning more about communication satellites--what are they, where are they, what do they do, what's a transponder, how do we monitor them, and so on and so on? I asked ED to work up a talk about satellites which could serve as a "primer" for the uninitiated. We will plan to give the talk one or two times beginning in September when more of the returnees are on board.
